February Fun

Another busy month on the horizon! Put on your dancing shoes and pump up the volume this weekend with two concerts by the Tremendous Johnson Blues Band (yes, that is really their name...). They'll be at Le Select and Grain de Sel, and when you hear them play, you'd hardly believe they only play in St Barth once a year, and return to their separate lives in the States after their vacations are over.

For those with a more artistic bent, there are two events organized by Space Gallery SBH this week. On Friday night, a show that is part of the Glaviano 50 celebration takes place in collaboration with Tropical Hotel and on Monday, Nicole Etienne's exhibit "Love" opens at the gallery. Then, on February 24, French painter Alain Le Chatelier's annual exhibit opens at Les Artisans with some wonderful new work.

Also on Friday, February 10, a fund-raising luncheon organized by the Saint Barth International Property Owners Association takes place at The Christopher Hotel. Proceeds go to benefit the Coral Restoration Project spearheaded by Didier Laplace, a native islander who is struggling to protect the ecosystems and biodiversity that is so important to the wellbeing of our environment.

On Saturday evenings, for the rest of the month, there are pre-Carnival parades with weekly themes, as the excitement mounts for Mardi Gras on Tuesday, February 28, when the big parade dances through the streets of Gustavia.

Happy Valentine's Day!

NEWS BRIEFS

DECREASED NUMBERS AT THE PORT OF GUSTAVIA

As of last November, and continuing through the month of January, the numbers at the Port of Gustavia have been lower than average. "There has been a serious decrease," notes Ernest Brin, director of the port. As of January 30, a total of 785 boats had entered the port, compared to 906 in January 2016. And this decrease concerns the larger sized boats, as there were 21 fewer boats in the 45-meter to 60-meter category than last year; and eight less in the range of 60 meters to 75 meters.

LARGE INCREASE OF ACTIVITY AT THE COMMERCIAL PORT

The evolution of sea containers coming into the commercial port merits attention, as an indicator of economic activity on the island. Last year there were more than 7,463 20-foot containers unloaded at the port, marking a 9% increase in just one year. In 2013, there were 4,464 20-footers, as a measure of comparison. Which means that over the past three the average growth has been more than 18.6%. That ratchets things up a notch for sure. From 2006 (3,478 containers) to 2013, the average growth was just 4.4%. The largest annual increase was from 2014 to 2015, with a record increase of 30%. The economic crisis of 2008 slowed things down, but the growth seen last year was back to the levels before the crisis, other than another decline from 2012 to 2013.

The battlements of Fort Karl, overlooking Shell Beach, now comprise informational signage about whales. Installed on Friday, January 27, in conjunction with the Conservatoire du Littoral, the signs were created by a sixth grade class at Collège Mireille Choisy, with the help of their science teacher, Mme Finot, as part of an academic project led by the Territorial Environmental Agency (ATE), the AGOA marine mammal sanctuary, and the association “Mon école ma baleine” (My school, my whale). To get them excited about this project, the students went out to sea (in collaboration with St- Barth Catamaran) to listen to the songs of the whales, thanks to a hydrophone.

The migration period for whales in our waters has started this year, with the observation of several specimens observed around the island recently by fisherman or passengers on ferries to Saint Martin. Keep your eye on the water!

And if you see whale, contact Territorial Environmental Agency at 05 90 27 88 18, to help with the census of these marine mammals by indicated how many, where and when you see them.

NEW REGULATIONS FOR ISLAND BEACHES

authorizations to use their slice of the beach, as the requests should be made this coming summer. This allows time, if needed, to come to an agreement about the limits of any given property, according to the Collectivité.

The Collectivité is also planning to take down the fences at the end of the runway at the airport in Saint Jean, as per Bruno Magras. The fences, required as a security measure by the civil aviation authority, will be replaced with surveillance, which will in turn be paid for by the fees paid by the hotels and restaurants to use the beach, explains the president of the Collectivité.

If the public beaches can be occupied by chaise lounges, with their low side tables and parasols, it is no longer possible to have tables and chairs, as restaurant activities will not be allowed. But not all food is forbidden, according to the new rules. It will still be possible to serve light food to the people on chaise lounges, such as “a club sandwich,” as notes Magras.

On Monday, January 30, the Territorial Council adopted new regulations concerning private occupation of the island’s beaches. The goal is to clarify the practices of hotels and restaurants located along the water, and constrain certain abuses of encroachment on public beaches, which are sometimes transformed into restaurants or even discotheques.

After many years of implicit tolerance, this type of activity on the beach will only be accepted as temporary authorization, as approved by the Collectivité. Such authorization will be good for one year, but renewable.

The first limitation is that at least 80% of any beach be left free of all tables, chairs, and chaise lounges, etc. These can only be installed on a surface no wider than the actual width of the hotel or restaurant along the beach, and only seven meters in depth, which corresponds to two rows of chaise lounges.

There will be an annual fee of 100 euros per square meter occupied. The fees are due as of January 1, 2018 and payable through March 31, 2018. As of October 1, 2017, hotels and restaurants will be issued their temporary

SAINT-BARTHÉLEMY

GLAVIANO 50 AND NICOLE ETIENNE

Space SBH Contemporary Art Gallery celebrates 50 years in the career of Marco Glaviano, one of the world's most influential and iconic photographers. He began his career shooting in Milan and New York, launching the careers of some of the world's most important supermodels including Cindy Crawford, Claudia Schiffer, Eva Herzigova, and Paulina Porizkova.

A special limited-edition collector's art book and commemorative print has been published by Space

SBH Contemporary Art Gallery. It is available with a choice of 4 different covers and with only 50 of each cover produced to mark the 50 years. Comprised of 362 pages, it features many previously unpublished photos, and an intimate glimpse into the life of Marco Glaviano through an extended interview which is included in the book as well as the limited edition fine art print pertaining to the cover image. On Friday, February 10, Glaviano will be at the Tropical Hotel in St Jean for a cocktail party and book signing from

Nicole Etienne «all you need is», 2017, 20x20 inches, 23 karat gold and oil paint on canvas

6pm-8pm. Ten of his images will be on display as well.

Then on Monday, February 13, a cocktail reception from 6pm-8pm at Space SBH Gallery in Gustavia honors artist Nicole Etienne. Her new show, "Love," opens on Saturday, February 11, just in time for Valentine's Day, and runs through February 20. The works evoke love in all of its forms, including small paintings of hearts. "I painted non-stop for weeks, not sleeping much, up before dawn, working until my hands ached. I made heart after heart, loving each one that grew. If one was sad or angry, I made it jolly. If one was ashamed, I forgave it. If one was blissfully abundant, I let it be," says the artist.

SBIPOA FUND-RAISER FOR CORAL RESTORATION

The Saint Barthélemy International Property Owners Association's annual fund-raiser is on Friday, February 10, 2017 at The Christopher Hotel—Taino Restaurant—at 12:30pm. This year, the association decided to support an environmental project and the proceeds will be donated to the Coral Restoration Project (www.coral-restoration-stbarth.com/). Tickets are 75 euros per person for a three-course lunch. This event might be sold out by now, but to check about last-minute reservations, please email Nancy Swann at ndswann@mindspring.com.

WHAT IS THIS BEAR DOING IN GUSTAVIA?

What is this large bear doing standing at the end of harbor in Gustavia? Normally a denizen of the Yukon Territory in Northwest Canada, he stands with a camera around his neck like a tourist. And his left hand holds something a bit odd, some kind of agglomeration of plastic and lava, which might be found in Hawaii, rather than the cold north. Yet it's meant to represent the plastic debris that pollutes all the oceans on the planet. In fact, plastic forms a mass with natural sediments, and finishes by creating a hybrid substance, which scientists have baptized a "plastiglomerate." Maybe this bear has come to question us about the future, starting with climate change and global warming, which means this bear's native habitat could become just as hot as the West Indies. With his camera, he looks at us, just as we look at him. And we find each other just as odd looking. Called "Chronicle of the Latter World," this sculpture is the work of Brooklyn-based Polish artist Joanna Malinowska, and is on temporary loan from collector Alberto De La Cruz, who is familiar with the island of Saint Barth and has sent his bear as an ambassador of environmental awareness.

TREMENDOUS JOHNSON BLUES BAND ROCKS THIS WEEKEND

Way back in 1987, a few friends got together to play some music at Le Select, and a legend was born: The Tremendous Johnson Blues Band. The funny thing is that they only play together once a year, in Saint Barth, during their mid-February vacation. This requires some communication among the band members to make sure they are all on the island at the same time. A few years ago, they deviated from the norm when they came back to play during Les Voiles de Saint Barth in April.

The only two original members of the band are Nick Sadovnikoff (keyboard), an anesthesiologist in Boston, and Leo McLaughlin (guitar) who is a construction foreman in Baltimore. The rest of the band now comprises Brett Gardner (guitar/also with the band almost since the beginning) a carpenter in NYC; Ted Mortimer (guitar), a financial manager for fitness club in Vermont; Henry “Hoppy” Hopkins (drums & vocals), a silversmith in Baltimore; Linda Nelson (vocals), a dessert chef in Baltimore; Linda Mortimer (vocals) a yoga teacher in Vermont; and on bass, Mathurin Cagan, a St Barth musician and taxi driver.

Rumor has it that Leo McLaughlin was responsible for the name of the band. “The joke was that Tremendous was back at the hotel with a hangover but his band always came to the gig,” Sadovnikoff told The Weekly in a 2014 interview. “Over the years we have become a bit more rehearsed than spontaneous...we play a lot of blues and reggae... nobody plays as a full-time job, but Leo and Hoppy play sometimes in Baltimore. It’s a great way of having a joint activity as part of our vacation, and we dream up a few news songs each year to keep it fresh.”

This weekend, the band will play at Le Select on Saturday night, February 11, and at the Grain de Sel in Saline on Sunday afternoon (reservations required). Put on your dancing shows... these shows are guaranteed to be fun. And last year Jimmy Buffett sat in with them, so anything is possible!

TIME OUT

Where to go dancing? See an art exhibit? Listen to live music? Time Out keeps you up to date on local happenings. Let's party !

The Tremendous Johnson Blues Band is one of the most popular bands to play in Saint Barth. They appear once a year, every February, and draw full houses that love to dance to their sultry, bluesy renditions of some great songs. In fact, Saint Barth is the only place you can hear this band, as it comprises of a group of friends who gather on the island from various places in the US for their annual reunion. Catch them this weekend on Saturday night at Le Select and Sunday afternoon at Le Grain de Sel, and get ready to party.
